

Weekly Review Column (460 Words) Rights Reserved

Title: Whoopteedoo National Health Care.

So what do you think? Should we or shouldn't we, have a National Health Care Program?

You got to remember that when you voted for president Obama we would end up with his version of the Medicare drug plan debacle exponentially worse.

Think about it, better join AARP now, no better not, who knows what we'll end up with. I don't know maybe we all ought to apply for illegal alien status. They get the best of both worlds... well sort of.

Did you know there are currently at least 12 - 15 million illegal aliens in this nation? And, illegal immigration costs taxpayers $10.5 Billion each year; 33% of America's prison population are non-citizens, 36-42% of illegal aliens are on welfare. In Los Angeles: 95% of outstanding murder warrants are for illegal aliens.

So why is our friendly political system allowing this problem to exist? My considered opinion, to bolster our Social Security money intake. They have to do something to replace the 50 million or so babies we aborted.

Most of us worry about inflation though, generally running about 4.5 percent on the average until lately. Now they want to freeze your assets off. Obama says, nobody gets a raise until my popularity increases in the polls.

Seriously, the private sector yells and screams, saying the government can't do anything right while the beltway beggars say we need more money to stoke our pork barrels.

As is the private health-care sector's cost is passed on to the deep-pocketed patient (that's us), raising the cost an average of 30-80 percent each year.

Whoopteedoo are we in trouble. How can the government screw us any worse... they'll find a way... yet... somebody's got to get some relief!!!

We're like the man sent up a tree to chase the Bobcat down so the dogs could get at it, but the darn thing jumped on us instead. "Somebody shoot quick," someone said, "One of us has got to get some relief!!!"

To get our minds off politicians, how about a research project that finally attacks the problem of what to do with our nuclear wastes. Yeah I know, something beside burying it under the Las Vegas Casinos where you lost your inheritance. I figure they could use household dryers because they make socks disappear. There must be a transonic deep-space time-warp tunnel hidden in each dryer. You can see me looking for it each week.

The director, some relative of Pelosi I think, should put chunks of nuclear waste into socks and set the timer to 40 minutes or so. That should do the trick.

Or maybe they could use Dilbert's time travel machine; I think its great. Its hooked up to a big toilet and when you place the traveler in it they disappear with a swosh.

That's what happened to my gold fish, I put him out of misery into a time warp. Who knows where he went... maybe with my other old gold fish pets that died, makes about as much sense as other suggestions I've read about recently.

So what's next?